My dearly beloved wife.

What style of expression can I use in addressing you that will not seem tame in comparison to my feelings. I went down to New Brittain, ([illegible word] spelt with one t) + dined with Rev Mr Endell. I told him as we walked down town afterward that it made me homesick to go with any bodys family. How I long to be amoung you all + in our own home. I do not believe that we shall get there before the first of June. In view of this I must pay you a visit again.

A few days with you + the children + then away again. But we will be happy while together, I have met with little success here yet shall get a few hundred[s].

Love to All,
Your loving,
Husband
